The coming election is not a mere political election, in which the difference between the candidates and the parties who support them is a difference of opinion on questions of constitutional construction or measures of administration. It is a contest between the friends of Republican Government and its enemies—between the Government of our country established by our failures, backed by its army and nevy and the host of volunteer soldiers on the land and and soldiers on the sea, and the friends of their conjury at home who support them, on one side, and on the other side a confederacy of red handed traitors pirates on the sea and on the land. Robels in open arms against their country, and their friends, in those parts of our country where treason dare not raise its flag nor show its ugly head, but proclaims its demand for a creation of hostilities against the pirates and Robels, who are recling and staggering under the blows of the gallant and patricity volunteers that have railled and are still reliving around the flag of our country. The question in the election, as in the field of battle, is: Shall the United States small as a nation among the nations of the earth, or shall the United be broken in pieces and the piece of the Robels which I cannot set saide deny me the privilege and in pleasure of attending and participating in the proceedings of your meeting. ASHES—The market is unsettled, and prices are nominally lower.

BESWAX is quiet, and prices are easier. We note a sale of 3,000 hs. Yellow on private terms.

COTTON—We wish we could make some alteration in our report, and not be compelled to again inform our readers that "the market is dull and heavy." Nothing new, however, is the expected until gold has become more settled. Middlings we think, could be benght somewhere in the neighborhood of $1,000 $24.25, but of course rates are dull—merely neminal, and not to be depended on.

COFFEE—The market continues very dull, and all quinktions are entirely nominal. At anction to day 1,300 begs Riccold at $25,000 (e.g. undeterms.) The above of Riccold is $25,000 (e.g. undeterms.)
